Cardiff Council Issue 162 June 2014

NEWS

CARDIFF Castle, the city's iconic tourist attraction, enjoyed record visitor numbers and income for 2013/ 2014 making it the most successful year in the Castle's history. Visitor numbers to the Capital's must visit destination, which is popular with visitors and residents alike, rose by more than 10 per cent compared to last year, reaching 266,927 with over £2million generated in admissions alone. Residents and people who work in Cardiff can apply for a Castle Key which gives entry to the Castle, as well as special discounts in the shop and café, for three years for a £5 charge.

Changing to face the challenges ahead

The City of Cardiff Council has developed a major action programme to help the local authority best face the challenges ahead and reposition Cardiff as Europe's most liveable capital city.

The city is continuing to face unprecedented financial challenges with savings of £50m needed in the current year and a forecasted further £90m of cuts needed over the next three years while demand for key services which support the most vulnerable continue to grow.

The programme will put the co-operative agenda at the heart of the way the Council operates, involving communities and customers in the design of services as well as proactively addressing a number of key issues.

The three year Organisational Development Programme will review the way services are delivered to meet demand, widen opportunities for people and communities to shape the services they receive and identify delivery models that may be established to meet demand pressures and reflect budgetary realities.

Opportunities for further efficiency savings will also be identified and there will be an emphasis on openness through increased citizen engagement and information sharing, providing clearer opportunities for people to participate in decision making processes.

City of Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Phil Bale, said: "We are committed to placing people at the centre of our approach to leading Cardiff and reforming local public services, creating a city for people and delivering services with people.

"Our Council is currently too top-down in its approach and this is something that needs to be addressed to ensure we are providing the very best in terms of service delivery. To do that we will need to strengthen performance management, develop a stronger commercial focus and become a more open and engaging organisation. We also have to value our workforce and increasingly look beyond our boundaries to share and develop new ways of working.

"A co-operative approach will mean more engagement about key decisions and more involvement from local people in designing the services they depend on, day in, day out.

"There are already some great examples of co-operative working going on in the city like our Families First programme which involved young people in helping to design a £29m programme to support those families in most need; the six new Neighbourhood Partnerships that have been created to bring local people and partners together to tackle issues in our communities, and Cyd Cymru, our collective energy-buying scheme that is already helping people save money on their energy bills."

Councillor Bale added that it is key that a major public discussion and engagement exercise, A Cardiff Debate, is undertaken. "A Cardiff Debate on how we deliver services to understand what people want and need as working co-operatively with communities will help us tackle today's challenges," he said.

"It is crucial that this is part of the programme as we are talking about making fundamental changes to deliver sustainable services while continuing to capitalise on Cardiff's growing appeal as a place to live, visit and do business."

Scrutiny focus on market and arcades

AROUND 2,000 members of the public have given their views on Cardiff's Central Market and historic arcades, as part of a survey conducted by the Council's Scrutiny Research Team.

The Council's Economy and Culture Scrutiny Committee have been examining the importance of the market and arcades which are part of the city's rich cultural heritage and have been an iconic feature since the 1900s.

Chair of the Economy and Culture Scrutiny Committee, Councillor Craig Williams, said: "In light of the recent economic downturn and the changing face of the city centre, the Committee is examining the importance of the Central Market and historic arcades to the city as a retail and tourist destination, and the role in which the Council can support traders to ensure the market and arcades remain a thriving part of the city centre economy."

Each market stallholder and arcade shop owner has been given the opportunity to give their opinions as part of the survey which will form part of an inquiry to be completed in June. Recommendations will be submitted to the Council's decision makers following its approval.

How to get involved

This inquiry is just one example of a number of pieces of work carried out by the Council's Scrutiny Committees, which are comprised of members who do not hold Cabinet posts. They work together to ensure accountability, openness and transparency, and to ensure that the Council's services are provided fairly, efficiently and effectively.

There are five committees - Children and Young People, Community and Adult Services, Economy and Culture, Environmental and Policy Review and Performance.

These Committees will soon be setting their work programmes for 2014/15 and would welcome input from members of the public. If you have any suggestions of issues that should be looked in more detail by one of the Council's Scrutiny Committees, please write to Scrutiny, Room 243, County Hall, Cardiff CF10 4UW, or email scrutinyviewpoints@cardiff.gov.uk

Social enterprise garden nursery is a vision of success

A Cardiff-based charity's garden nursery project is branching out to double its growing capacity.

Vision 21's Oaks Nursery Garden, a social enterprise that offers responsive vocational training and practical work experience for people with learning disabilities, has opened a new polytunnel that will allow the staff and trainees to increase their production of colourful garden annuals, filled containers, hanging baskets, herbs, potting compost and vegetable plants.

The City of Cardiff Council has been working alongside Vision 21 for many years in a mutually beneficial partnership that provides the Council with valuable input from the trainees to help maintain and restore the city's parks and gardens while providing trainees with the opportunity to gain knowledge and experience in our wonderful green spaces.

Based on Allensbank Road, Heath, The Oaks was started in 1997 by Vision 21 and is well known for its friendly and welcoming service. Each day around seven trainees work at the nursery where they have the opportunity to gain skills, confidence and self esteem as they learn about all the aspects of running the enterprise including plant care, preparing the filled containers, retail skills and customer care. The trainees are also encouraged to work towards nationally-recognised Agored Cymru accreditation of their skills.

Vision 21 Chief Executive, Rob Larkins, who was joined by staff, trainees, trustees and supporters at the official opening of the polytunnel, said: "We are incredibly grateful for the ongoing support from Cardiff City Council and the interest they have shown in this enterprise development."

The Oaks has also been working increasingly closely with local community groups such as the Friends of Roath Park, and has taken on a number of contracts for bringing on plants for the park, and putting on plant sale stands. The nursery garden is open Monday to Friday, 9am to 5pm and also on Saturdays during June at 26 Allensbank Road.

Exploring partnership options for leisure and arts venues

The City of Cardiff Council is to test the market to establish the level of interest in managing its leisure centres, St David's Hall and the New Theatre.

The Cabinet has agreed for Prior Information Notices (PINs) to be issued as the Council explores different options for the future management of facilities across the city.

Cabinet Member for Community Development, Co-operatives and Social Enterprise, Councillor Peter Bradbury said: "Cardiff has internationally recognised leisure and cultural activity and is seen as a potential gateway for prospective management partners to break into the wider Welsh market. We are confident we are developing an innovative approach that will safeguard Cardiff's leisure and cultural offer as underpinning any potential partnership will be this administration's central guiding principles of promoting good health in conjunction with excellent facilities, looking after our staff and improving our services while making substantial savings.

"To this end, we commissioned industry experts Max Associates to analyse the key options for these critical parts of Cardiff's leisure and cultural landscape within a backdrop of unprecedented financial pressures."

An analysis of how leisure facilities are run UK-wide showed that only 28 per cent of leisure centres and swimming pools are now managed in-house.

Max Associates concluded

there are three main options for the Council to consider which include In-House Operated Services, Locally Established Trust and Private Sector Partner/Established Trust but the Private Sector Partner/Established Trust option may be the best for Cardiff in reducing costs whilst meeting the Council's overall objectives. However, at this stage, no option is ruled out.

Councillor Bradbury added: "We have also undertaken soft market testing and there is a great deal of interest in the management of both the leisure centres and arts venues by specialist operators. We will be interested in hearing from the market and also from our communities about how they think these services can be designed and managed in the future to best meet the needs of our communities."

Building bridges not blocking beds

The social work teams at the University Hospital of Wales and Llandough Hospital have joined forces with the discharge liaison nurses and placement advisors to create Wales' first Integrated Discharge Service.

The two teams, one in each of the hospital sites, are co-located in one office and are jointly managed by Cardiff Council, Vale of Glamorgan Council and the University Health Board in an excellent example of integrated working.

The aim of the service is to improve the patient's experience of planning for discharge through better co-ordinated approach by health and social care staff, especially for those people who will require care or support once they leave hospital.

The immediate benefits of the service are one point of contact in each hospital for staff, patients and their families, improved communication between health and social care staff especially on the wards, where the referrals are made, and shared processes and paperwork.

The teams can also facilitate links and liaison with community services to support people when they return home but also to prevent unnecessary admissions to hospital in the first place.

Already Cardiff has seen the numbers of people with delayed discharges being significantly reduced in recent months and the service will further develop during 2014 with the addition of other council services providing advice and knowledge in areas such as housing.

Cabinet Member for Health, Housing and Wellbeing, Councillor Susan Elsmore, said: "The Integrated Discharge Service is just one example of the many ways that the Council will be working with our partners in Health and the Vale of Glamorgan Council, helping people to get the care they need in the place that they want it.

"The Council's Integrated Health and Social Care Programme indicates our commitment and the willingness of our partners in the health, social care and third sector to increase the scale and pace of our partnership working so that we are providing the most vulnerable in our communities with high quality, joined-up services which are sustainable and offer best value."

The Integrated Health and Social Care Programme includes a framework for development of older people's services in Cardiff and the Vale over the next five years.

"Introduction to Meaningful and Purposeful Lives" is based on the fundamental principle that services should be planned around a person's needs in such a way as to prolong their independence and wellbeing within their local community for as long as possible.

Welcome to the June edition of Capital Times

May was an eventful month that kicked off with the exciting news that fast-growing US cyber-security firm Alert Logic has chosen to establish their headquarters for Europe, the Middle East and Asia here in Cardiff, bringing over 100 well-paid, highly skilled jobs to the city.

This is a clear demonstration that our economic strategy is working and that the Central Enterprise Zone, centred around Callaghan Square, is beginning to deliver real benefits for residents and businesses across the city-region.

Alert Logic executives were very impressed with the all-round package of support from Cardiff and its partners which is testament to the great work being done by the Council's Economic Development team, Cardiff Business Council and the Welsh Government.

Recruitment agency IntaPeople are now working closely with Alert Logic and have already produced some really high quality candidates across all the available job roles. Visit their website at www.intapeople.com

Later in the month, I was thrilled to be part of the official launch of Cardiff's bid to be a host city for the EURO 2020 European Championships. Securing one of the world's most prestigious and most watched sporting events would be a massive boost for this city, bringing in thousands of visitors and enhancing our international profile.

Next summer's First Ashes Test at the SWALEC Stadium will do just that, of course, and it's fantastic that the England and Wales Cricket Board has awarded that series opener to Cardiff again, providing another perfect opportunity to show off how well-equipped our capital is for such big occasions. (see Capital Sport, p6).

Finally, this edition's front page reports how the Council has agreed a framework for a three-year programme of change, when many alternative ways of delivering services will need to be explored.

I believe that the needs of people who use our services must be at the centre of how they are delivered in the future, alongside a comprehensive approach to achieving internal efficiencies.

Simply, the status quo is no longer an option and so we will be listening closely to, working with, and empowering those who use and deliver our services to ensure we can adapt to face the challenges ahead.

News in brief

Foodbank app

Cardiff Foodbank, which recently opened its fifth food distribution centre in the city, is encouraging people to download its app to keep up to date with the latest needs.

The city's newest centre is now open at St Saviour's Church in Splott. By downloading the Foodbank app (appsto.re/i66k4J7 or <http://goo.gl/IatNh>), people can keep up to date with the latest shopping list and needs of their local area in real time.

Donations to Cardiff Foodbank can be made at a number of Cardiff libraries and council buildings across the city and food donations are now well on their way to reaching one tonne in weight.

Armed Forces Day 2014

The 100th anniversary of the outbreak of World War I will be commemorated as part of Armed Forces Day in June.

The event on Saturday, June 28, will once again be centred on Cardiff Castle, the city centre and Coopers Field in Bute Park.

The Armed Forces flag will be raised at Cardiff Castle on Monday, June 23 and a special golf match will be held at Cottrell Park Golf Club on Wednesday, June 25.

The June 28 event will include a parade through the city centre ending at the castle at 10.30am and a drumhead service at Coopers Field. For more information, visit www.armedforcesdaywalessouth.org or contact Dave Morris on 01446 772043.

Exploring plants and wildlife on new trail

A new wildlife explorer trail, created by the Friends of Nant Fawr Community Woodlands and Cardiff Council has been launched in the city.

The trail in Rhydyphenau Park and Rhydyphenau Woods, north of Roath Park, has been designed mainly for children but can be used by anyone visiting the woodlands.

A series of posts have been installed in the area, with metal plaques depicting plants and wildlife.

Special booklets are available in local libraries or to download at www.nantfawr.org and include fun facts and a map to help find the location of the posts.

The initiative has been funded through the Countryside Partnership Programme, a partnership between Cardiff Council's Planning Department and Natural Resources Wales.

Tenovus chosen as Lord Mayor's charity

The Lord Mayor of Cardiff, Councillor Margaret Jones, has chosen Tenovus as the Lord Mayor's charity for this year.

Tenovus brings support and treatment to the heart of communities for cancer patients and their families. Their Mobile Cancer Support Units travel across Wales delivering chemotherapy and lymphoedema treatments closer to home, saving patients often long and stressful journeys to and from hospital.

Councillor Jones said: "Cancer touches everyone in one way or another and I'm delighted to be able to raise awareness and donations for this wonderful hands-on charity during my year as Lord Mayor."

Tenovus also fund the cancer researchers of tomorrow who are looking for a cure, and those who are trying to find the best ways to care for and support people affected by cancer in Wales today.

For more information about Tenovus, visit tenovus.org.uk, call 029 2076 8850, follow Tenovus on Twitter @tenovuscancer or search Tenovus on Facebook.

Voice of Wales

IT'S that time of year when many parents across the city have been notified by the Council which nursery or primary school their child will be attending in September.

The first day at school is a key milestone in all children's lives and while children take the first step on the education ladder in their stride parents fret about how their little ones will fare.

As demand for Welsh-medium education continues to increase in Cardiff, for many parents who have chosen to send their child to a Welsh-medium school but have little or no knowledge of the language themselves, the prospect may be even more daunting.

But there is no need to be concerned as there are plenty of support, advice and resources available.

Mother of two, Sophie Miller, from Canton, said: "Neither myself nor my husband, Chris, are Welsh speakers but we knew for sure that we wanted our son, Charlie, to attend a Welsh-medium school. We were apprehensive at first when he started in reception at Ysgol Treganna in September but the school has been fantastic. We have had lots of support and all the correspondence we receive is bilingual so we're really happy with the way things are working out. Charlie's Welsh is coming on really well."

Parents may be concerned that they don't understand what their child is learning, about how they can help their child with any homework or how they will be able to support their child as they start to learn to read.

Help is out there and websites such as www.bbc.co.uk/cymru/plant and cyw.s4c.co.uk are useful with their games, songs and stories to hear and read while the Cyw app is great for little ones learning to form letters for the first time. Twf's website www.twfcymru.com, which offers free advice to parents on raising children bilingually, also has free resources, advice and a section on homework help.

S4C's @TifiaCyw encourages non-Welsh speaking parents to learn the language whilst enjoying Cyw programmes with their children (7am and 8am every morning and 3pm and 4pm from Monday to Friday). The live Twitter feed, @TifiaCyw coincides with the programme to provide key words, translations and suggestions to accompany some of Cyw's most popular programmes.

Parents who have a little knowledge of Welsh may find their own language skills being enhanced as they become more involved in their children's learning and many look to build on the few words they already know by enrolling in a course. Visit www.cardiff.ac.uk/learnwelsh to find a suitable course in your area.

Biodiversity Corner

Biodiversity is all living things. It provides us with food, clothing, medicine, building materials and fuel. It helps reduce stress and aids relaxation. Each month Cardiff City Council ecologist Matthew Harris will point out some of the great biodiversity you can see across the city.

JUNE

Why is the Council not cutting the grass?

In recent years, 95 per cent of our wildflower meadows have been lost due to changes in land management practice, and this has resulted in the decline of native wild flowers. Flower-rich grasslands were once a common sight throughout Wales.

Cardiff Council is committed to helping to conserve these wildflowers and the wildlife that relies on them by increasing the area of these meadows in the city, restoring former grassland areas, and bringing the countryside into the heart of Cardiff.

Why will changing the grass cutting regime help?

You may have noticed areas around the city and in the parks where grass has been left uncut. Leaving areas of grass uncut during the spring and summer will give space and opportunity for wildflowers to develop and set seed in the coming years.

It may take a few years for some wildflower species to appear, but it is hoped that flowers such as Ox-eye Daisies, Cuckooflower, Buttercups, Clovers, Bird's-foot Trefoil, Devil's-bit Scabious and various orchids will soon start to blossom.

Grass cutting will take place in these areas once a year in late summer, with cuttings being removed to prevent nutrients going back into the soil, thereby fertilising it. Flower meadows thrive on what we think of as poor soil, whereas fertilising the soil allows a small number of more vigorous grass species to take over.

Other benefits:

The creation of eye-catching displays of native wildflowers in urban areas can increase the quality of life of those living in these areas, and can encourage growth and investment by providing an attractive and interesting environment in which to live, work and play.

Grasses and wildflowers attract bees and butterflies, and make excellent habitats for grasshoppers, crickets and small mammals such as voles and field mice. These in turn are food sources for birds, reptiles and larger mammals.

This new management scheme is less intensive, requiring only one cut a year, freeing up precious council time and resources to work on other important projects to improve your parks.

Wildflower Areas

As well as changing the mowing regime to encourage native wildflowers, in some areas the Council will be sowing non-native 'wildflower' seed mixes. These provide a rapid and very colourful display of flowers, which still provide some benefits for our insect pollinators.

Electoral system changes ahead

FROM this summer, changes are being introduced to the current electoral system to make it much clearer and to ensure the data collected is more accurate.

Each person will be required to register to vote individually rather than by household.

Currently, information is collected on a household basis, and one person provides the details of those living at the property with one signature to confirm the information is correct. This is about to change and everyone living in a property over the age of 16, who isn't already registered, will need to register individually.

The majority of voters will not need to complete a form as their details on the Electoral Register will be verified through Electoral Services. To simplify the process for those not on the register for the first time they will be able to register to vote online if they wish.

Individual electoral registration (IER) will give everyone who is eligible to vote control over their registration. The new online process will be quicker, convenient and more secure.

Transition to IER will take place in England and Wales in June 2014. Those individuals who are not confirmed as being eligible to vote from the current Electoral Register will need to provide additional information to confirm their eligibility. As we will ask for identifying information including date of birth and National Insurance number, we will be able to verify that everyone on the register is who they say they are and will remove redundant entries from the register. This is vital to creating a register in which everyone can be fully confident.

Look out for your letter from the Electoral Registration Officer in June and July which will let you know whether the data on the register has been verified or whether you will need to complete an additional form in hard copy or online to register.

For more information on individual elector registration, please contact Electoral Services on 029 2087 2031 or visit the Electoral Commission's website at www.electoralcommission.org.uk

Giving children a Flying Start in Ely

ST Francis Flying Start childcare centre is celebrating its first year of welcoming young children through the door.

Serving the Ely area and sharing a site with St Francis Roman Catholic Primary School, the centre opened in June last year and offers childcare provision for two to three-year-olds, supporting early years learning as the children progress towards nursery.

Flying Start and St Francis Primary School have struck up a great working relationship over the past 12 months and often do things together with the children.

Mike Williams, Headteacher at St Francis Primary, said: "Early years learning is priceless and although Flying Start has been on site here for only one year, it has made such a difference. The partnership our school has with Flying Start means we can identify local needs, which brings great benefits for the community.

"The nursery school staff and staff from Flying Start have worked so well together from day one. Parents and children have been comfortable with the early years provision since the very beginning."

Fiona Williams, Manager of Parachutes Childcare Ltd which provides Flying Start provision at St Francis, said: "The staff we brought in to Flying Start at St Francis have a great deal of experience and brought good practice and knowledge to the new facility from the start.

"The hard work and commitment of my staff and the staff from St Francis Primary has delivered great results for Flying Start here in such a short time. We work so well with St Francis Primary and I'd like to thank Mr Williams and his staff for making us feel so welcome."

Flying Start is a Welsh Government funded programme which is targeted at children from birth to three years, 11 months and their families who live in certain areas. To find out more, visit www.cardiff.gov.uk/flyingstart

The Cardiff Further Education Trust is a registered charity which has been set up for the advancement of education and is designed to benefit pupils who are leaving school or going on to places of further education or employment. Financial assistance is available for outfits, clothing, instruments, tools, books, course fees etc. The money must be used to pay for the cost of the course or necessary equipment and books.

The objectives of the Charity are:

- To provide financial and other assistance to pupils who, for at least two years, have attended a secondary school in Cardiff to enable them to partake in further education or vocational training.
- To provide maintenance allowances to allow pupils who are in need of financial assistance to finish a course at a secondary school in Cardiff.
- To provide grants to young men and women resident in Cardiff to enable them to travel or to attend special courses in connection with their education.

Awards are made at the discretion of the Trustees.

HOWARDIAN TRUST

The Howardian Trust is a registered charity, which has been set up to give financial support for broad educational purposes not normally provided out of statutory funds.

Funds are available for the benefit of those who fall into one of the following categories:

- Children and young people between the ages of 3 years to 25 years who attended Howardian High School, Cardiff prior to the 31st August 1990
- Children and young people between the ages of 3 years to 25 years who either attended Marlborough Infants or Junior Schools, Roath Park Primary School or Albany Road Primary School, Cardiff after 31st August 1988.
- Primary, Infants and Junior Schools mentioned above and any other groups operating in the former catchment area of Howardian High School.

Awards are made at the discretion of the Trustees. Support has previously been given to students attending postgraduate and access courses, travel expenses to attend a course and help for a school to purchase equipment.

Council welcomes Ashes return

The City of Cardiff Council has warmly welcomed the news that Glamorgan's SWALEC Stadium will host the first Ashes Test of 2015.

Following the thrilling showdown between England and Australia in Cardiff in 2009, the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) has now confirmed that the Welsh capital will once again kick off the series next summer from July 8-12.

The Council was instrumental in helping to finance the initial redevelopment of the SWALEC stadium as well as helping to secure £4.5m of funding for the club.

Cabinet Member for Community Development, Co-operatives and Social Enterprise, Councillor Peter Bradbury, said: "It's wonderful news that Cardiff will be the venue for the first Test of next year's Ashes series. The 2009 Test was a resounding success and I think anyone who visited the city for that match would agree that the SWALEC Stadium is a superb Test venue.

"Cardiff is a world-class sporting city and we have a fantastic pedigree when it comes to hosting some of the biggest sporting events around. The competition to host Test matches is becoming increasingly fierce so I'm delighted the England and Wales Cricket Board has awarded such a prestigious match to Cardiff.

"The countdown is on now. I look forward to next summer when thousands of cricket fans will descend on the city and we will have a chance to showcase Cardiff at its best.

"Let's hope the weather will be on our side and once again, the action on the field is as exciting as the 2009 clash.

"It won't only be play on the field that will be highlighted of course. In 2009 many people commented about the picturesque setting of the SWALEC Stadium, just yards away from Bute Park, the city centre and the Millennium Stadium. Not many cities can boast such a setting and we look forward to highlighting this again.

"This is tremendous news and I am confident the city will be once again rise to the occasion."

• City Council leader, Councillor Phil Bale with First Minister, Carwyn Jones and Wales manager Chris Coleman at the Millennium Stadium

Heart of the celebration bid submitted

THE leader of the City of Cardiff Council, Councillor Phil Bale, believes the capital's proven track record of hosting high profile sporting events is key to bringing EURO 2020 matches to Cardiff.

The Football Association of Wales (FAW) has submitted a bid for Cardiff to be chosen as one of the 13 host cities for the 2020 European Football Championships with the Millennium Stadium at the heart of the bid, which would see three group games and either a last 16 or a quarter-final match staged in the city.

Outlining the huge impact of a successful bid which would see Europe's best battling it out at the 74,000-seater stadium, the City Council Leader said: "From previous experience we know that hosting major sporting events can deliver a significant positive economic impact to the region. Conservative estimates have shown the region would benefit from an economic impact of around £42m should Cardiff be chosen as one of the 13 Host Cities for UEFA EURO 2020 and in staging this prestigious tournament, the city of Cardiff would also be broadcast to a worldwide audience.

"The City of Cardiff Council has a demonstrable track record of working closely with event organisers to successfully deliver high profile events within the Welsh capital and we fully support the FAW's bid to bring EURO 2020 matches to Cardiff.

"Cardiff enjoys an enviable reputation as the event capital and we are ready to welcome the European football family and show our wonderful Welsh hospitality."

As well as the Council's backing, the FAW's bid has the full support of the Welsh Government, the Millennium Stadium, Cardiff and Bristol Airports, and the key rail and bus operators.

Welsh International and Real Madrid star, Gareth Bale, said: "This could be the beginning of a great period for Welsh international football. I believe we have a real opportunity of qualifying for the 2016 European Championship Finals in France. It would then be an unbelievable experience to play in the 2020 European Championship finals in my home city of Cardiff.

"I have been fortunate to play in some of the world's greatest stadia but nothing matches the atmosphere and passion generated by the Millennium Stadium. These are exciting times for Welsh football and I'm really proud to offer my full support to the FAW's UEFA EURO 2020 bid."

UEFA will announce the 13 successful cities that have been chosen to host the UEFA EURO 2020 Championships on 19 September.

Cardiff Cares

Cardiff Children's Services - Can you help us make a BIG 'Difference'

If you are a qualified social care professional or someone who is looking for a new challenge that will help us make a positive difference to Cardiff's vulnerable children and young people - we want to hear from you!

We currently have lots of exciting opportunities within our busy and dedicated Children's Services directorate which offer vital services for those most vulnerable and most in need across the city. The opportunities range from social workers to senior practitioners, case managers, support staff, foster carers and adopters.

Our focus. Our priority.

The Council has set out a clear commitment for supporting those most vulnerable within our communities, as well as increasing the future opportunities for our young people as a priority. Vulnerable children are therefore at the heart of the Council's priorities and Children's Services social workers play a fundamental role in achieving a positive difference into lives of children in need.

Every role in Children's Services is crucial to ensure we offer the best possible care and support for Cardiff's looked after children from birth through to 21 years old.

Leader of the City of Cardiff Council, Council's Leader, Councillor Phil Bale is backing the campaign, he said "Social workers and those who work within the field of social care are often our hidden heroes. It's an area of high pressure and responsibility, which is not for everyone. It requires complete commitment to the cause, with no room for complacency.

I am impressed by the commitment and hard work of this Council's social care teams. I want to thank all the staff who already make such a positive difference and look forward to welcoming more talented and passionate individuals to join the team."

So why join our team?

We aim to make Cardiff the destination of choice for social work professionals in Wales and to earn that status because of a reputation for best practice in our work with children and their families. For this reason we want to attract the very best social work professionals and are interested in anyone who wants to help us make that aim a reality.

The benefits

There are certainly lots of benefits to joining our team, aside from the job satisfaction and the quality of life you will experience from living and working in Cardiff.

- We are the biggest employer in Wales serving the Capital City.
- Cardiff was recently voted the UK's best city for young people.
- We have a highly skilled and experienced team of professionals who will be on hand to offer extensive support and advice throughout a thorough induction.
- We are committed to the safety and wellbeing of our staff and understand the need to ensure a good work life balance.
- We offer an excellent range of training and development programmes with opportunities to invest in your career.
- You will receive excellent supervision and support from a very experienced management team.
- The culture of the organisation is open, committed to staff engagement and focused on learning.
- We have excellent partnership relationships with colleagues in health, the police, housing and education.
- We offer competitive rates of pay, with incremental increases.
- We offer flexible working arrangements and good annual leave packages.
- We have a comprehensive equal opportunities policy.
- Cardiff is a vibrant and exciting city with a clear ambition to become the most liveable European city.

Director of Children's Services adds "I am certainly very proud to be the Director of Children's Services in Cardiff and to lead an already proactive and committed team of very experienced and able staff and managers - we just need more of you to make Cardiff a leading city in social work with children. If you are looking to enter the field of social care or if you are already a qualified individual looking for a new and exciting challenge, I really do urge you to contact us to find out more."

Polly Evans, Social Worker, Llanedeyrn District Team

"I decided to go into Social Work after working for years supporting children, young people and their families. I realised I never had the dreaded Sunday night feeling as I enjoyed my work, so I decided this was the field I wanted to build my career in. I returned to university to study a Masters in Social Work. The most rewarding part of my job is when my involvement ends. Although for each child their outcomes are different, the point at which support from the childcare team is required marks a new chapter in their lives where they are safer and happier than when I met first them. For those looking to go into social care, don't be afraid to ask for help. It is such a diverse and challenging role even the most experienced social workers are still learning! Working in Cardiff offers the chance to work with children and families from diverse backgrounds experiencing a range of issues which can be challenging and exciting! There are also great learning opportunities and lots of support working as part of a large and experienced team".

Natasha James, Lead Manager, Child Health & Disability Team

"I worked in the Child Protection Team as an admin assistant with a team of hardworking, passionate people and my interest in social work came from this. Having a realistic view of social work, I knew I wanted a career in a profession that supported vulnerable people in Cardiff. I gained experience as a social work assistant and supported by Cardiff Council I studied the BSc (Hons) in Social Work. The job is rewarding because I work with a diverse cross section of people, making a difference in people's lives and achieving positive outcomes for children and their families. No day is the same bringing both personal and professional challenges. If you are just starting out, be realistic, use the resources and support networks in your working environment to assist you and take the good experiences with the bad. There are always situations where you need help and support, every day is a learning curve! Cardiff is a vibrant, diverse city with people from varied cultural backgrounds living here. A social work career in Cardiff provides a varied, challenging and exciting profession. Supported by experienced social work teams from Senior Management to Business Support, there is access to varied progressive training and learning".
